

- 1840

“Hospitals at Canton and Macao”,

in: The Lancet, vol. 34, n^o. 887 (August 29, 1840), pp. 814-815.

[Pr.; English]

University Library 4639636052

- 1892

GUNNISON, Charles A.

In Macao.

San Francisco: Commercial Pub. Co., 1892.

[Pr.; English; 39 pp.]

University Library 262827056

J^N MACAO.

—BY—

CHARLES A. GUNNISON.

In Macao.

A Story from the "Grasshopper's Library."

I was seated one pleasant day in the garden, which was given to the city of Macao by the Marcos family, near the grotto sacred to the poet Camoens, when a Portuguese priest came from among the wilderness of flowers and sat beside me. He spoke English with a pleasant accent and we read Bowring's effusion together, as it is engraved on the marble slab near by. Scarcely had we finished, and the father was telling me of Goa in India, when my uncle Robert came from beneath the great banyan tree and stood before us. The father jumped to his feet, and throwing back his brown robe, rushed forward toward my uncle with a stiletto held ready for an upward stroke. Quickly my uncle drew a revolver and fired—and the father fell dead at my feet.

- 1895

The Plague at Macao,

in: The Lancet, vol. 145, n^o. 3740 (May 4, 1895): 1131.

[Pr.; English]

University Library 4642476551

- 1926

Macau.

Macau: Conselho de Administração das obras do Porto, 1926.

[Pr.; Portuguese; 41 pp.: ill., color maps; 23 cm]

University Library BM 18969

- 1942

BERNARD, Henri.

Chronicle of Macao history.

[Chronique d'histoire de Macao],

in: Monumenta Serica, vol. 7 nos. 1-2 (1942), pp. 288-294.

[Pr.; French]

University Library 6287260305